

Collaborative integration of stories and scores in group career counselling with first-year applicants from previously disadvantaged communities: The JuniorTukkie Project

Integrative group career construction counselling provides the theoretical and conceptual background for the research. An integrative, non-experimental group design is used to gather data from a group of prospective young students at the University of Pretoria. The aim of the project is to investigate the effectiveness of participants' scores, stages, and their life stories concurrently to promote participants' career and self-construction and to increase the number of new first-year applicants from previously disadvantaged communities

The team

Dr Petrus Lombard

Project Manager: JuniorTukkie Project

Dr Pieter Clase

Senior Assistant Director: Recruitment at University of Pretoria

Kobus Maree: Lead researcher

